Subject: RE: question

Hello Noemi:

We did not use a consulting group to design our own program, but utilized specialists from our IT group from the sales/business side with input from various stakeholders.

We have met with our customers (our wholesalers) and made agreements with them to discuss certain accounts when appropriate. We also get their sales data for our products through contract agreement, which is fed into our Order Monitoring System data base. Our relationship with our own customers/wholesalers in the area of mutual support for order monitoring is key for us.

We have an OMS Committee which meets regularly, etc.

If you would prefer to use a consultant, I suggest you start with Ron Buzzeo at Ron.buzzeo@cegedim.com or via cell phone at (804) 363-2071.

Please let me know if I can help you further.

Best regards,

Jack

Subject: question

Good morning Jack:

I am a member of the NJPIG and I was attending to some of the meetings offered by this association. I remember that one topic on the meeting a couple years ago was the liability of manufactures to know "the movement of controlled substances of customer of your customers" (suspicious orders) I have a question, did you use a consultant to develop this process or it was developed by your firm? In case that you used a consultant can you provide me the name?

I'll appreciate your reply .

Thanks

Noemi Rebeco
